

WHAT'S MY FUTURE?

Skilled, stable, support

Please join the National Workforce Collaboration at our online roundtable session to discuss:

- What a career path would look like for support workers
- What entry level through to senior positions might entail in terms of role descriptions, responsibilities, qualifications and pay
- What other barriers currently exist and how these can be rectified (licences, checks and clearances, casualisation of the workforce)
- What skills and qualifications should be included in training to meet the needs and expectations of Australians living with disability
- How these training offerings align with career progression and professional development opportunities and
- How people with disability can be directly involved.

When: Monday 22nd September 2025

11am - 1pm EST

10:30am - 12:30pm CST

We extend a warm invitation to you to attend the National Workforce Collaboration's online Roundtable.

The Roundtable is one of many across the country that we are facilitating as part of our work. We have received funding by the Department of Social Services to develop a campaign to attract and retain skilled workers to the disability sector. The outcomes from the Roundtable will be used in our advocacy work and be shared across multiple government departments as we know multiple barriers currently exist across sectors.

The What's my Future campaign website was recently launched by federal Ministers Rishworth and Aly and Minister Cook, SA Minister for Human Services. You can see the website at www.whatsmyfuture.com.au and media from the launch at: <https://ministers.dss.gov.au/speeches/17696>.

The Roundtables are designed to build on existing work (for example the 2024 NDS Skills report and United Workers Union member survey) to create viable solutions around:

- Building a career path for workers
- Training reform

We are keen to have a diverse range of stakeholders attend to contribute their views so please extend this invite to anyone interested in lifting the value of support workers and helping build a skilled worker sector.

Who we are and the What's my Future Campaign

The National Workforce Collaboration is a group of people living with disabilities, support workers, support providers, union representatives and advocates who have co-designed a first-of-its-kind campaign to attract and retain a skilled disability support workforce.

The What's my Future campaign is a co-created national campaign designed to attract and retain disability support workers.

We want our campaign to change the narrative and societal attitudes towards people with disability and therefore change the value with which society views disability support work.

Our goal is to attract and retain disability support workers through a public facing campaign designed to promote support work as a viable career option, increase community awareness of disability support work and improve community attitudes towards people with disability.
